

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poisoning set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but" he writes "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 11-2 boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was sound and well as ever." For eruptions, eczema, tetter, salt rheum, sores and all blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival on earth. Try them. Garrett and Gerig will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

A SUGGESTION.

The conscious and unconscious influences molding the character of our American youth are numerous and powerful. Amongst these various influences that of parents, of course, stands first and pre-eminent. The mother who understands and improves her God-given opportunities may largely determine the future of her child during those very early years when she has it quite to herself, the world having comparatively little opportunity to get in its adverse work. Moses "refusing to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God" is a beautiful illustration of the power and permanency of one faithful mother's very early teaching. Likewise, today, parents may instill the knowledge of God so effectually in the tender, confiding, unsuspicious mind of the little one that loving the Savior will follow as naturally and as surely as light accompanies the rising of the sun.

A lady was entertaining in her home an eminent divine and improved the opportunity to inquire of him at what age she should begin the religious education of her child. Said he: "How old is your child?" "Four years, sir," was the answer. "Ah, madam," said he, "you have lost three years already."

Religion is the love of God in the heart. A child thus early carefully and prayerfully taught, by the time it comes to the age of responsibility, which, on an average, is at about seven years, will be loving God intelligently and fervently; in all probability will keep on doing so throughout life; will not be able to know when he began loving and serving God, having from earliest recollection loved the Savior and tried to be obedient to Him.

Bishop William Taylor says: "The children of Christian parents, scripturally taught and trained, ought not to need conversion, only a new and voluntary consecration and voluntary surrender."

But, however well the parents may discharge their duty the time soon arrives when home teachings and influences must be reinforced with the help of others. Now comes the preacher and the teacher. It is an open question as to which of these rank first in point of influence. That both should be consecrated as well as educated is recognized by every thoughtful parent and child-lover. The minister secures the attention of his young people and children about three hours in a week; the teacher about five hours for five days a week. The minister has an advantage from the fact that he is looked upon as "a man sent from God," divinely called to preach the gospel, and as he "goes about his Father's business" he exerts a most powerful influence. Christians, recognizing this, send up from family altars and devout hearts many an earnest petition to God to bless him in all his "labor of love," and thus kindly and most effectively aid in securing the desired results. But how many pray daily for teachers in their arduous tasks? Think of the teachers in the public schools, colleges, universities, mission and Sunday schools, and philanthropic and reformatory institutions! This vast host is engaged in work which vitally affects the highest interests of American youth, not only for time, but for eternity. Do not these, as well as the ministers, need the aid of the prayers of every Godly person? Do we not owe to them this unseen, all-prevailing friendly aid in their work? Would it not be well to imitate the example of one who was the pioneer in establishing two worldwide agencies—the international system of Sunday school lessons and the chautauqua movement, either of which is sufficient guarantee for inscribing the name of Bishop John H. Vincent upon the "Roll of Benefactors of the Nineteenth Century." It is his daily custom when clock, whistle and bell proclaim the hour of high noon to pray: "God bless our public schools." This prayer uttered aloud by Bishop Vincent at our dinner table some years ago, suggested our own duty and privilege in this direction. The value of the practice grows upon us. So much may be had for the asking. "Ye receive not because ye ask not." May the good bishop's example, through the medium of these few lines, inspire many devout hearts to pray daily, "God bless our schools and teachers," and so secure "showers of blessings."

"More things are wrought by prayer Than the world dreams of. For so the whole round earth is every way Bound by gold chains about the feet of God."
